My feelings in regard to safety hats are of a general nature and that is if a safety hat was going to prevent injuries, "yos", I think the men should definitely wear them. I am not thoroughly convinced that it should be made mandatory. Hats are provided for the men to use and also we are providing liners in the wintertime. We are encouraging our employees to wear the hats.

Mr. Hennessy and I have discussed the adzer unit in relation to the safety stop on the outbound feed. As it was explained to Mr. Hennessy this stop has been adequate for our use since it's installation and did not request his department to re-design this feature.

In discussing the adzing and boring unit with Mr. Smith, of Employers Mutual, the point was brought up that consideration had been requested, through our main office, for the remodeling of the adzing and boring machine. The proposal was outlined briefly and, since he was concerned with safety, these features were brought out. The safety feature of the remodeling was not a prime motivation in our request through Indianapolis.

Yours very truly,

H. L. Finch
